

Bok, Amanda

The Synergist

Amanda is a system thinker driven to achieve sustainable impact through collaboration and co-creation. She is The Synergist's Chief Partnership Officer, spokesperson, member of the senior leadership team, and lead incubator of the 'Global Patient Movement Catalyst'.

Formerly CEO of the European Haemophilia Consortium, Amanda also previously worked for the World Federation of Hemophilia, the International Committee of the Red Cross (HQ & NY Delegation to the UN), and Friends of Europe.

A cohort-one EUPATI Fellow, Amanda is a former member of the European Commission Expert Group on Rare Diseases and the European Patients' Forum (EPF) Ethics Committee. She is currently an Ambassador for the European Intuitive Trainers Network (EUNITA).

Amanda holds a MSc in Environment and Development from the LSE in the UK (distinction) and a BA in International Relations and English Literature from Austin College in the US (magna cum laude). She has co-authored several academic papers and written for a US newspaper.

Born in Bolivia, Amanda grew up internationally and is now based in Brussels.