

Barna, Stefi

Centre for Sustainable Healthcare, UK

Stefi Barna is co-founder of the Sustainable Healthcare Education network which supports health professional schools to incorporate planetary health and sustainable healthcare teaching into their curricula. She is Associate Professor of Public Health and Sustainability at Azim Premji University (India), and teaches planetary health at Queen Mary University of London (UK), and medical peace work for the University of Bergen (Norway). She previously led public health teaching at Norwich Medical School, University of East Anglia (UK). Her academic background is in medical history (UC Berkeley) and international public health (UCLA).