Initially trained as a Medical Doctor, I turned into a health economist, now with more than 20 years of experience in health financing and funding, providers' payment mechanisms, health systems reforms programs (including health insurance systems), public private partnerships in health, as well as implementation of public health programs in priority areas of intervention. I currently work as a Senior Health Economist in the Projects Directorate of the EIB (Life Sciences Division), in charge as part of my team with the design, appraisal and monitoring of the Bank's health projects and programs. It is with pleasure that for the last 6 years I am also the President of the Patient Classifications Systems International professional organization, a forum for Case Mix and health services financing debates.
