EUROPEAN
HEALTH FORUM
GASTEIN

Csobod, Eva
Regional Environment Centre, Szentendre, Hungary

Senior environment health expert of the Regional Environmental Center for Central and Eastern Europe (REC) from 2003. She had been involved in several EC projects on air quality and health, climate change, sustainable use of natural resources, education and communication (SINPHONIE, SEARCH I, II, III, SPREAD, Changing with Climate, etc.) She is leading the WP4 Engagement of citizens and stakeholders of the ClairCity project (2016-2020). She has close cooperation with the WHO European Centre for Environment and Health in several areas (air quality and children' health, waste management and public health, implementation of sustainable development goals in Europe, etc)

—

Eva Csobod has a Doctorate in Chemistry from the Eotvos University in 1983. She received a Master Degree in Environment and Development Education, from South Bank University, London, UK IN 1991.

The leader of the Health and Environment Topic Area of the REC.

Key qualifications: research in natural and social science, environment and health, in education and training of students and environmental NGOs, international project management, cooperation in regional development, policy development and implementation of the regional operational programme, communication and media, integrated water research management, solid waste management (household), sustainable development (indicators using it in practice, in policy making, in planning, national and local level), global issues and conventions, national park management. She coordinates several international research project in the area of environment and health, sustainable consumption and production, innovative education and communication Before her recent position she worked for the Professors House in Budapest as the Head of the Environmental Education and Communication Department and Distance Learning Methodology

Department.

She participated and coordinated a number of EU-research projects (Tempus-JEP program, BEETA project, Phare program, OECD-ENSI national coordinator etc.) and published extensively in scientific journal and books. She was member of the IUCN CEC Steering Committee for 6 years. In the last 4 years, she has active involvement in FP6 and FP-7 project in education, health, sustainable consumption and production, environmental migration and sustainability evaluation (EASY-ECO, EACH-FOR, DELIB-SCP). From 2003 she is the coordinator of the Green Pack, education for sustainable development program in Hungary.

She coordinated the SINPHONIE project on air quality and children's health in 25 countries in Europe, supported by EP and guided by DG SANCO. Currently she is the coordinator of the CLAiR-City project at the REC on air quality, carbon footprint and public health,

She participated in the WHO Europe Mid-term review editorial group in 2014/2015 to promote environment and health, Health 2020, research and healthy life-style.

(last updated 24.09.2017)