EUROPEAN HEALTH FORUM
GASTEIN

Czasny, Ines
Austrian Public Health Institute GÖG

Ines Czasný is working in the field of health care and social planning for almost 15 years. Her current position at the Austrian Public Health Institute GÖG is deputy-head of Section Health Care Planning and System Development. She focusses mainly on projects concerning health workforce forecasting and planning, health services research and health care planning on regional and national level with special regard to outpatient health care. Besides this she supports the "Austrian Geographical Health Information System – ÖGIS" with main focus on data quality and comparability.

Ines Czasný studied technical mathematics in Graz (Austria), with specialization in planning mathematics, statistics and economics. After some years as researcher in the field of applied statistics, focussing mainly on demography and epidemiology, she joined the Offices of the State Government of Styria, last as head of Section Social Planning. Since 2009 she is senior expert at the GÖG.

(last updated 01.10.2017)