

Fasce, Angelo

University of Coimbra

Angelo Fasce is a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Coimbra, Portugal. He is a philosopher of science with experience conducting psychological research, with publications on the demarcation problem and on individual differences in constructs related to anti-scientific conceptions. Currently, his main line of research focuses on how to address anti-vaccination arguments in medical consultations, thus developing various tools and training programs within the framework of the H2020 JITSUVAX project.
