

Grove Krause, Tyra
Statens Serum Institut

Tyra Grove Krause Head of Department, Senior Consultant, MD, PhD Infection Epidemiology & Prevention Statens Serum Institut, Copenhagen, Denmark Profile Tyra Grove Krause is a medical epidemiologist and specialist in public health medicine with a special interest in infectious disease epidemiology and vaccinology. Her main areas of interest are epidemiological methods, surveillance of infectious diseases and outbreak investigation, Immunisation Information Systems, and vaccine-effectiveness and safety studies and mortality monitoring. She has worked extensively on improving surveillance of infectious diseases and vaccination programmes using existing national electronic health care databases. She is State Epidemiologist and member of the National Immunisation Technical Advisory Group and the Epidemic Committee. Tyra is an associate professor at University of Copenhagen and teaches medical students, Master of Public Health and PhD students infectious disease epidemiology and vaccinology. Tyra is participating in several networks and working groups under the European Center for Disease Control and WHO. Scientific production More than 50 papers in peer-reviewed journals