Hanson, Elizabeth
Swedish Family Care Competence Centre / Eurocarers

Elizabeth is a Professor of Health Care Sciences at the Linnaeus University (LNU) in Sweden and Research Director at the Swedish Family Care Competence Centre (Nka), a national centre of excellence in the area of informal care. She heads up the 'Carers, care and caring' research group at LNU which acts as the research arm of Nka. Elizabeth is a board member and prior President of Eurocarers, the European association working for informal carers. She established the Eurocarers Research Working Group, consisting of both research and carer members, whose aim is to feed into the definition of evidence-based policy making on the role and added value of informal carers. She acts as expert advisor to the National Board of Health & Welfare Sweden on carer issues. Elizabeth currently leads a major EU Horizon 2020 young carers project ('ME-WE') comprising Eurocarers members in six European countries. Elizabeth has a long- standing interest in carer issues and over the last twenty years she has led a variety of national, EU and international projects in partnership with informal carers, service users, health care practitioners, decision makers and civil societies to enhance and/or stimulate innovative service provision. The ultimate goal being to help empower people living with long-standing, chronic conditions and their informal carers across the life course.
