Centre for Food Policy, University of London City

Professor Corinna Hawkes is Director of the Centre for Food Policy at City, University of London, UK, which runs postgraduate education programmes, conducts research and engages with policymakers with the mission of advancing the integrated and inclusive food policy. She is also the Co-Chair of the Global Nutrition Report, an international report taking an integrated approach to tracking progress to address the double burden of malnutrition across the globe.

Professor Hawkes expertise is in policies to help address poor quality diets and malnutrition worldwide. A big focus of her work is on aligning agriculture, food systems and nutrition. In 2004, while working the International Food Policy Research Institute, she helped establish what is now the Agriculture for Nutrition and Health Program of the CGIAR. In 2009, while a fellow at the University of Sao Paulo, she studied the incentives for cross agriculture-nutrition collaboration in the development of the Brazilian school meal programme, and in 2010 published the report "Value Chains for Nutrition" about how food supply chains could become more oriented towards nutrition outcomes. In 2013, while Head of Policy and Public Affairs at World Cancer Research Fund International, she established the NOURISHING Framework which tracks policies to promote healthy eating worldwide

In 2016 she was a lead author of the report "Food systems and diets: Facing the challenges of the 21st century" published by Global Panel on Agriculture and Food Systems for Nutrition.

Corinna has also worked for the World Health Organisation and regularly advises international agencies, governments and NGOs. She co-chairs the Global Future Council on Food Security and Agriculture of the World Economic Forum and sits on the London Food Board, the EAT-Lancet Commission on Healthy Diets from Sustainable Food Systems and the Lancet Commission on Obesity.
