

Hines, Philip

European Policy Centre and Member of the Young Forum Gastein Network

Philip Hines currently works at the European Policy Centre (EPC) on a wide variety of health matters. Within his duties, he coordinates the Coalition for Health, Ethics, and Society (CHES), which promotes multi-stakeholder dialogue between health and non-health practitioners on issues relating to health, ethics and society. Beyond his primary role working on health matters, and as a Briton committed to the EU, he coordinated EPC's 'UK-EU Facilitation Forum', which involved a series of roundtables bringing together high-level actors aiming to facilitate a positive outcome from the referendum. He is currently researching the EU's institutional structures for receiving scientific advice. He holds an MSc in European Public Health from the University of Maastricht, and a BSc in Natural Sciences (Biology and Environmental Science) from the University of East Anglia. He is also an alumna from the University of Calgary, Canada. Before joining the EPC, he worked as a Research & Evaluation Assistant at EuroHealthNet.

Philip Hines is a member of the Young Forum Gastein Network.
