Howell, Sean
Hornet Gay Social Networks and LGBT Foundation

Sean is an activist turned entrepreneur; he founded Hornet, where he built a 25 million-user gay social network and the largest LGBT newsroom in the world, publishing in seven languages on five continents and delivering 4 billion monthly ad impressions. He serves as CEO at the LGBT Foundation, which works to leverage the LGBT Token and the benefits of blockchain technology for the empowerment of the LGBT community. Previously, he was a fellow of the World Affairs Council, trustee, and President of the Young Professional International Network. He helps many organizations leverage technology to expand their impact; serves on various nonprofit boards and committees including Mpact (MSMGF), UNAIDS, E-CDC, PFLAG and co-chair at the Center for Public Health and Human Rights at John Hopkins; and is a founding member of the UN Global Coalition for HIV Prevention and technical advisor to UNDPs and the World Bank LGBTI Index, as well as chair of Tech4Hiv.org
