

Hunter, David

Institute of Health and Society, Newcastle University, United Kingdom

David is a graduate in political science from Edinburgh University. His academic career spans over 40 years researching complex health systems with a particular interest in how policy is formed and implemented, public health and health systems transformation. His most recent book is a second edition of The Health Debate (Policy Press, 2016). Between 1999 and July 2017, David was Director of the Centre for Public Policy and Health at Durham University. The Centre was designated a WHO Collaborating Centre in Complex Health Systems Research, Knowledge and Action in 2014. Since August 2017 he has been based in the Institute of Health & Society, Newcastle University. David is jointly leading with Rafael Bengoa, Co-Director of the Institute for Health and Strategy (Si-Health), Bilbao, the WHO health system transformation initiative which started in 2015. Among his recent former positions, David was a non executive director of the National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) from 2008-16, and an Appointed Governor of South Tees Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust from 2009-2017. David has been a specialist advisor to WHO and to the UK Parliamentary Health Committee. He is an Honorary Member of the UK Faculty of Public Health, and Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians (Edinburgh).

(last updated 28.09.2018)