

Karafillakis, Emilie

London School of Hygiene & Tropical Medicine

Emilie Karafillakis is a researcher for the Vaccine Confidence Project, a research group led by Heidi Larson focused on studying global vaccine hesitancy, confidence and trust. Her work focuses on understanding determinants of vaccine hesitancy in European populations, and strategies addressing concerns about vaccination. She is also monitoring online sentiments around HPV vaccination and has done some work on vaccine providers hesitancy and the influence of the media on pregnant women's confidence about influenza vaccination.

(last updated 28.09.2018)