Košir, Urška
University of Oxford

Urška is a PhD candidate and researcher in the Department of Experimental Psychology at the University of Oxford. She studies psycho-social adaptation to cancer in adolescents and young adults. Urska also chaired the committee on health literacy and self-care of the European Health Parliament, which proposed actionable policy recommendations to improve health literacy in the EU. Some of her most recent work explored the impact of COVID-19 on young people living with and beyond cancer.
