Kristaps Krafte is a digital health entrepreneur and healthcare innovations expert. Kristaps is a founder of digital stroke rehabilitation therapeutic "Vigo" that helps stroke survivors access quality prescription rehabilitation on demand. Being a graduate of Copenhagen Business School's "Innovation in Health Care" Master's degree and spending a few years in large university hospitals in Denmark and Latvia, Kristaps is aware of the organisational challenges faced by healthcare systems around Europe. "It seems simple but we have to stop working in silos, there is so much potential for partnerships and cooperations, we just have to be open to them. Even if it means partnering up with Artificial Intelligence."
