Löffler, Peter
European Commission DG CLIMA

Born and raised in Germany, Peter Löffler moved to Brussels in 1997 to work for the EU.

He currently is a Policy Officer in the unit for adaptation to climate change of the European Commission's Directorate-General for climate action. His main responsibilities are climate adaptation and health, including the European Climate and Health Observatory; climate adaptation in forestry, biodiversity and nature conservation policies; and the Climate-ADAPT knowledge platform, in cooperation with the European Environment Agency.

Earlier in his career, Peter worked in the Commission's Environment and Research Directorate-Generals; in what is now the European Climate, Infrastructure and Environment Executive Agency, and in European green energy and sustainable urban development trade associations and networks.

Peter holds an engineering degree in Landscape Architecture and Environmental Planning, and a PhD in social science.
