Mathis, Margaux
World Health Organization

Ms Margaux Mathis is a Technical Officer in the Epidemic and Pandemic Preparedness and Prevention department (EPP) within the WHO' Health Emergencies programme (WHE).

She has been involved in outbreak and pandemic responses since 2014, including Ebola Virus Disease in West Africa in 2014-2015, MERS in the Republic of Korea in 2015, Plague in Madagascar in 2017 and the COVID-19 pandemic. She has worked on many cross-cutting issues such as transfer of knowledge, foresight initiative and use of new technologies for better preparedness and response to epidemics.

She is part of the Secretariat of the Strategic and Technical Advisory Group on Infectious Hazards with Pandemic and Epidemic Potential (STAG-IH), which provides independent advice and analysis to WHE on the infectious hazards that may pose a potential threat to global health security.

Margaux holds a master degree in political and social sciences, with a specialization in public health policies.
