

McGhie, Diana

World Economic Forum

Diana Vaca McGhie is the Lead for Healthcare Policy at the World Economic Forum, where she advances the Centre for Health and Healthcare's initiatives by engaging in key international forums, such as the G20, and strengthening relationships with governments. She serves as the primary liaison to the World Health Organization and G20 ministries, driving international collaboration on health priorities including preventive care, healthcare transformation, and health system resiliency. With over 20 years of experience in non-profit leadership, international relations, and advocacy, Diana has built strategic alliances with governments, medical associations, and the private sector to improve public health outcomes. She holds a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from Stony Brook University and a master's in public administration from New York University.