

McGuire, Philip

King's College London

Professor Philip McGuire is Head of the Department of Psychosis Studies at the Institute of Psychiatry Psychology & Neuroscience, King's College London. He is also the Joint Director of the Psychosis Clinical Academic Group, South London & Maudsley NHS Trust, and leads the Precision Psychiatry Cluster at the NIHR Maudsley Biomedical Research Centre. He is a Fellow of the Academy of Medical Sciences, the Royal College of Psychiatrists, the International College of Neuropsychopharmacology and the European Psychiatric Association, and is Associate Editor of the British Journal of Psychiatry. His research has focused on understanding the neurobiological basis of psychiatric disorders, and on using research findings to develop new treatments, including cannabidiol. He has published 640 scientific papers, has a Scopus h index of 105, and his publications are in the top 1% for citations in psychiatric research.