

Morris, George

European Centre for Environment and Human Health

George Morris BSc (Hons), PhD, FREHIS, FFPH George Morris is Honorary Visiting Professor at the European Centre for Environment and Human Health at the University of Exeter Medical School. Over a long career in environmental health, Professor Morris has worked in local government, in Academia at the Universities of Strathclyde and Glasgow, as a Consultant in Environmental Health with the National Health Service in Scotland and as a Scientific Policy Adviser to Scotland's Chief Medical Officer. Now working independently, George continues to provide advice on aspects of environment and human health for, amongst others, the World Health Organisation in Europe and the European Environment Agency. Recent collaborations have involved Public Health England, the Scottish Environment Protection Agency and the Dutch Public Health and Environment Institute (RIVM). With a commitment to reflecting a much richer understanding of the environment in public health policy, George continues to participate in research and publish widely in peer reviewed journals.

(last updated 31.08.2017)