Young Forum Gastein

I have more than 6 years experience working in various organizations from nonprofits to private sector organizations where I developed expertise in EU health policy, patient advocacy and global health. My past experiences include the coordination of rare diseases patient advocacy groups in the European Reference Networks at EURORDIS as well as the management of the health programming pillars at both Friends of Europe and the Africa-Europe Foundation where I contributed to several EU health policy initiatives. In my last role at Amgen, I coordinated collaborations with rare diseases patient advocacy groups in Europe. I hold a masters in Public Policy with a specialization in Global Health from Sciences Po in Paris.
