

Nicolaescu, Svetlana

Ministry of Health, Republic of Moldova

A public health professional with two decades of progressive work experience, spanning clinical practice, healthcare management, teaching, program management, and policy formulation at the national and regional levels. Currently, serves as State Secretary at the Ministry of Health of the Republic of Moldova, with responsibility for health promotion, disease prevention, and public health emergencies. Prior to current position, worked in civil society sector leading innovative public health programs to advance TB and HIV response; served as individual consultant with UNICEF, supporting implementation of the country program; and held several positions with the Ministry of Health progressing from department head to deputy minister and bringing significant contribution to advancing national public health agenda. Strong leadership in promoting and implementing comprehensive tobacco control law. Technical expertise and implementation experience in communicable and non-communicable diseases, in particular disease prevention through risk factors' control and health promotion; tobacco control; nutrition; immunization; adolescent health; health system strengthening and community strengthening systems; policy formulation; health planning and program design. MPH degree from Kansas State University and a degree of doctor of internal medicine from State University of Medicine and Pharmacy in Moldova. Native of Romanian, fluent in English and Russian.