Panteli, Dimitra
European Observatory on Health Systems and Policies

Dimitra leads the Observatory's work on innovation and its Team in Berlin, aiming to support evidence-informed health policy and practice in Europe. Her work spans biomedical, technological and organisational innovation, with particular areas of interest around access to medicines, antimicrobial resistance, digital health, health(care) and the environment, and new models of care.

Before joining the Observatory, Dimitra was a senior research fellow and the managing director at the Department of Health Care Management at Technische Universität Berlin (TUB). She holds a doctorate in public health from the TUB, a Masters in Science – Public Health from the Charité Medical University, and a Medical Degree from the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki. She spent the 2016–2017 academic year as a Commonwealth Fund Harkness Fellow in Washington, DC.
