Renshaw, Nina
European Public Health Alliance

Nina joined the European Public Health Alliance as Secretary-General in 2014. EPHA is Europe's biggest civil society network campaigning for better health in all policies. She represents EPHA and its membership in policy discussions and oversees EPHA's campaigns and projects. She represents public health perspectives in civil society platforms including the Social Platform, the Better Regulation Watchdog, Green Budget Europe and Health and Environment Alliance.

Previously, during 8 years at campaign group Transport & Environment, Nina successfully led European advocacy campaigns towards the EU, UN-ECE and national governments. She has campaigned on a variety of policy issues including vehicle safety, pricing and taxation, sustainable public investment and health impacts of transport.

After graduating in International Business in the UK, she started her career in logistics in Austria. She gained an MA in European Policy and Politics from Humboldt University in Berlin and Bath University where she specialised in civil society and EU policy-making.
