

Marchl, Silvia

Styria vitalis

Silvia Marchl is a nutritionist and public health professional (MPH) at Styria vitalis with experience in community-based projects, participatory planning processes and project management.

From 2019 to 2022, she served as Project Coordinator for the FGÖ-funded project “Ortsmitte”, which focused on creating social spaces and opportunities for interaction for older people. The project also resulted in the publication of the guideline “Healthy in Local Spatial Planning.”

From 2023 to 2024, she led the implementation of the Ludwig Boltzmann Society-funded project “Healthy Streets and Squares,” which involved a participatory spatial planning process.

Through these projects, Silvia Marchl has gained extensive experience working with municipalities and local communities. In addition to her public health expertise, she brings experience in facilitating participatory processes.
