Singer, Johannes
Primary Health Care Center, Schwechat

My name is Johannes Singer and I’m a general practitioner at the primary health care center in Schwechat, Lower Austria.

During med school, activities with the IFMSA and an ERASMUS exchange in Spain sparked my interest in public health. As result and in addition to my medical training, I completed an MPH at the Medical University of Graz (thesis: "Overdiagnosis - definitions, causes and consequences"). Apart from my work with patients I teach at the Medical University of Vienna and Karl Landsteiner University in Krems, Lower Austria.

In my everyday work I strive to combine the knowledge gathered from individual medicine on one hand and public health approaches on the other to the benefit of my patients. I especially enjoy supporting patients on their way back to sports after illness or injury or as a preventive measure. This originates in my own interest in all kinds of sports and outdoor activities. On recovery days I can be found playing the ukulele.
