

Langsrud, Solveig

Norwegian Food Research Institute

Solveig Langsrud, Ph.D. is a Senior Scientist at the Department of Food safety and Quality at Nofima, Norway. Dr. Langsrud holds an M.Sci. in Biotechnology from Norwegian University of Science and Technology and a Ph.D from the Norwegian University of Life Sciences, specializing in Food Microbiology. Her main research has centred on how microbial communities in food and food environments survive, adapt and affect food safety and quality. Recent activity has been transdisciplinary research on how consumer behaviors affect risk of foodborne illness.

Dr. Langsrud coordinates the H2020 Research and Innovation action Safeconsume (www.safeconsume.eu) with 32 partners from 14 European countries. The project aims to help consumers mitigate risk from foodborne infection through education, information and products and a more inclusive food safety policy.