EUROPEAN HEALTH FORUM
GASTEIN

Sørensen, Kristine
International Health Literacy Association

Kristine Sørensen is an executive advisor on health literacy with a background in public health and global diplomacy. She empowers leaders to advance health literacy by design and works across the public and private sectors, academia, and civil society to promote health literacy for all. Her collaborations include the World Health Organization, the Council of Europe, national governments, McKinsey, patient organizations, and universities worldwide. Kristine Sørensen hosts the Global Health Literacy Academy, chairs Health Literacy Europe and serves on advisory boards nationally and internationally. She was Honorary Professor at I-Shou University in Taiwan and the founding President of the International Health Literacy Association. As an award-winning global thought leader, she has published widely cited research and authored books that have influenced audiences across and beyond the health sector.