Spak, Carina
AmberMed

Carina Spak has been leading AmberMed for 10 years, a clinic founded by Diakonie Österreich and run jointly with the Austrian Red Cross. AmberMed organises volunteer doctors, translators, surgery assistants and therapists who provide medical care for uninsured people on an outpatient basis. AmberMed focuses on the medical care for uninsured people, pregnancy care, diabetes care, health care and the promotion of the health competence of the target group. Carina Spak is a graduate social worker with additional studies in management and training in peace work. Before her work at AmberMed, Carina Spak was the deputy head of a shelter of the Diakonie refugee service for asylum seekers (including many irregular migrants), worked in Skopje/Macedonia for a women's organisation in the field of peace work and subsequently coordinated numerous projects in South-Eastern Europe, Palestine and Mozambique within the framework of Diakonie International Aid. Carina Spak gave numerous lectures and wrote corresponding articles about her work.
