My passion are science and people. Hence, it appealed to me to study medicine and following undergraduate studies in Berlin, I went into surgery in the UK and Germany, ending up in surgical oncology, caring for patients with breast cancer, sarcoma, melanoma and many other malignancies. To pursue my vision of science and people further and to give patients with cancer more options, I went into Industry research. I have since led small and large teams in clinical research, development, commercial settings and medical affairs . Over the years, I have completed a research MD, MBA, FRCS, FFPM, specialty registration and an GFMD(hon) and have published in several aspects of surgery, medical affairs, public health, medicine development and the use of AI in medicine.
